LOG & TIMBER HOME LIVING

AND THE AWARD GOES TO...

Every year, as part of our National Log Homes Month (July) and SepTimber (September) celebrations, Log & Timber Home Living sets out to find the best log and timber structures across the globe. Many companies submitted their designs, and thousands of readers voted online for the winning entries.

Here, we present the designs that came out on top in 2022!

The Backstory

The Campbell River design is a log post and beam home on Vancouver Island. The accompanying basement, not included in the total square footage, has another 1,277 square feet to explore.

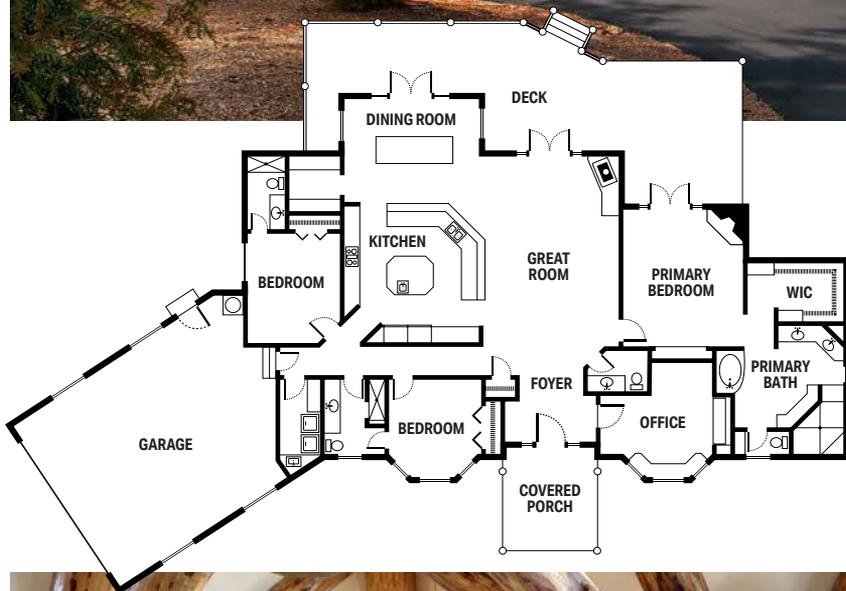

Our Take

This hybrid is the epitome of the popular modern-rustic style. Dark modern features, such as the fireplace and countertops, are offset by unique, light wood accents throughout.

The Backstory

The Big Bear design is a post-and-beam-style home featuring very intricate log work for the roof system and truss work. The logs are all Douglas fir with a skip-peel finish, giving the house a rustic-yet-refined appearance.

Our Take

This home shows the beauty of single-level living. The open-concept main living area separates one wing of bedrooms and the garage from the main living and office area.
